Recent Tournaments at Mechanics' Institute

On February 11, the Mechanics' Institute hosted its monthly double-header of Scholastic Swiss in the morning, and Quads Championship in the afternoon.

Fifty seven players competed in 14 sections, and Sebastian Suarez (1971) was top quad winner.

Complete results for the February Quads can be found here.

The February Scholastic Swiss had a strong turnout of 32 players competing in three sections. First place in the 700+ section was taken by Hayes Marvin (965) with 3.5 points out of 4. Anthony Dokanchi (678) scored a perfect 4-0 to take 1st in the under 700 section, and Jonathan Gay (unr.) took the top under 450 prize, also with a perfect 4-0.

Complete results for the February Scholastic Swiss can be found here.

Both Quads and Scholastic Swiss were directed by Local TD Arthur Liou, assisted by Local TD Michael Hsu.

The New Year Tuesday Night Marathon wrapped up on February 21 with a total of 94 players competing in three sections.

IM Kyron Griffith (2450) took clear 1st in the 2000+ section with 5.5 points from 7 games. Tied for 2nd and 3rd were IM Elliott Winslow (2223) and Siddharth Arun (2186) with 5 points each. Luke Widjada (2104) and Archit Dasika (2143) both tied for the Best under 2200 prize with 4.5 points each, while Sebastian Suarez (1945) took the Best under 2000 prize, also scoring 4.5 points.

Anthony Ivanenko (1712) ran away with 1st place in the 1600-1999 section, scoring 6 points with no losses. Victor Briancon-Marjollet (1708) and Karl Stuart Kingma (1683) were a full point behind, tying for 2nd and 3rd. There was a three-way split for Best under 1800 between Sivavishnu Srinivasan (1640), Stephen Parsons (1780), and Felix MacNee (1692), all scoring 4.5 points. There was an even larger tie for Best under 1600, with five players splitting the honors at 3.5 points each: Pratyush Hule (1424), Neil Kulkarni (1564), Ronald Allen III (1525), Chunhui Gu (1525), and John Chan (1515).

The under 1600 section also saw a clear winner, with unrated Isaac Lazarus scoring an impressive 6.5 points, while another unrated player, Wilson Wong, took clear 2nd with 6 points. Sam Nolen (826) and Michael Edward Phillips (1420) split 3rd place and the Best under 1400 prize with 5.5 points each, while the Best under 1200 prize was split four ways between Adam Levine (643), Belinda Xu (1106), Otto Albert Schmidt (1089), and William Fitzgerald (755), all scoring 4.5 points.

The New Year TNM was co-directed by International Arbiter Judit Sztaray and Senior Tournament Director Scott Mason.

The Spring Tuesday Night Marathon kicked off March 7 with 95 players competing in three sections. Information, standings, and results can be found here.

The Spring TNM is being directed by Senior Tournament Director Scott Mason and International Arbiter Judit Sztaray.

Talk about a missed opportunity: At this point Kyron Griffith, Archit Dasika and I were tied for 1st-3rd with 4, followed by Luke Widjaja the lone 3.5. I'd already played Kyron. Kyron was taking a half-point bye, Luke beat Archit, and I ... floundered badly against Arun Siddharth. I knew he played the Jobava System but spent too much time on his previous preferred line (the Trompowsky), I forgot the line I prepared and played something else entirely, I wobblily mixed ideas more often than the last-place finisher on Top Chef, and passed by various drawing opportunities in the ending -- to go down. Grrr! Kudos to Arun, though, showing his gentle strength in these "buzzing mosquito" openings. 1.d4 Nf6 2.Nc3 d5 3.Bf4 g6

Both in this game and in the current TNM, Jashith shows a lot of promise. He lost only one game (to Luke Widjaja), maybe had too many draws, but mainly played a stable game. Still, as this game showed, his opening repertoire isn't airtight. 1.d4 d5 2.c4 c6 3.Nf3 Nf6

7.0-0 Qd7 8.exd5 Nxd5 9.Nc4 f6 10.Re1 0-0-0 11.a3

The game was lost in these next couple of moves for Black. The kingside pawnstorm, which I judged to be more dangerous for White than White's queenside pawnstorm is for Black is in fact too slow. The reason for this is the presence of the bishop on c5 and knight on c6, which can be used to gain tempi as White pushes his pawns. There is a comparative lack of White pieces on the kingside to be used for tempo-gaining moves. EW: Stockfish 15.1 just says Black is "clearly better." 11...g5 12.b4 Be7?

6...Be6 7.b3 a5!/?N A novelty, as far as I could tell, and one that my silicon friend likes. Which shouldn't be surprising, considering it was inspired by computer prep! The idea is, with the bishop on g2, to grab the space and then redirect the b7-knight to c5 and prod the sensitive a2-b3-c4 complex with our Q-side majority pieces. 8.Ne2?!
 While the engine doesn't consider this to be too grievous, the knight is rather poorly placed on e2 and simply serves to be a loose target. It's a far long way from its ideal e3-square.

[8.Nf3!/? and the pawn is not hanging

8...Nbd7 9.Be3 Ng4!/? I had my doubts about this move during the game since the knight ends up sitting awkwardly placed and then being kicked back, but I with my assessment: the Q-side play takes priority over the woes of the K-side! 10.Bd2 Nc5 11.Qc2 a4 12.0-0

[22...cxd6! 23.Bxa8 Rxa8-+ Simply neutralizing any of White's play and emerging three pawns up with a winning endgame in sight.]

23.Qd1 Ra2 24.Nc1 Rc2 It's amazing

how engines always find the simplest way forward. This time Stockfish prefers to exchange the poorly placed rook for the very active light squared bishop and, once again, neutralize White's play.

The Polish Defense (224 pages, paperback, $24.95) by Jerzy Konikowski and Marek Soszynski

Attacking the Strongpoint: The Philosophy of Chess (240 pages, paperback, $24.95) by Igor Zaitzev

Russell Enterprises, founded over thirty-five years ago, publishes chess books on all facets of the game which is apparent from its recent offerings. Among them are a tournament book, a middle game work, an opening guide, and a book encompassing the life's work of one of the more creative chess minds of the 20th Century.

When one thinks of the strongest tournament held on American soil in the first half of the 20th Century New York 1924 immediately comes to mind. Indeed, this event, with the current (Capablanca), past (Lasker), and future (Alekhine) world champions participating, was a veritable who's who of the best players of the time. It was not, however, the only world class event held in the United States between 1900 and 1950.

New York 1927 (1. Capablanca 2. Alekhine 3. Nimzowitsch) was also quite strong as all six participants were top-ten players. So also, was Cambridge Springs 1904, which while lacking the top to bottom strength of the other events, had a number of famous names playing including World Champion Lasker, Schlechter, Teichmann, Pillsbury, Janowsky, Showalter, Marco, and Chigorin.

Unlike the New York events, which were blessed with tournament books written by Alexander Alekhine, Cambridge Springs initially produced no such work dedicated to it, although it did play a major part in the American Chess Bulletin getting started. It would be over thirty years before Fred Reinfeld's book on Cambridge Springs 1904 would appear. Unfortunately, the print run for that self-published work was modest and the book didn't make a big impact.

Now, over a century after the event was held, Robert Sherwood has produced a fitting tribute in the form of Cambridge Springs 1904. This attractively produced 400-page hardback provides the history of the event and how it came to be, player biographies, photographs, detailed annotations to the games, and more.

Cambridge Springs 1904 was a huge triumph for Frank Marshall who won the event with a sensational score of 13-2, two points ahead of World Champion Emanuel Lasker. The tournament also marked the end of Harry Nelson Pillsbury's career – the great American player would die two years later at the age of thirty-three.

Despite the strength of the event and the individual stories of Marshall and Pillsbury, the most enduring legacy of Cambridge Springs is the opening which bears its name.

The sequence 1.d4 d5 2.c4 e6 3.Nc3 Nf6 4.Bg5 Nbd7 5.e3 c6 6.Nf3 Qa5 dates back to at least 1892 when Lasker played it in a simul albeit in a way that wouldn't be recognized today (7.Bxf6 gxf6?!). It would be four more years before the Cambridge Springs Defense scheme (...Qa5 with ideas of exploiting the position of the bishop on g5 with ...Ne4 and ...Bb4) would show up in a high-level event although again not in a way we recognize today. Tarrasch-Albin, Nurnburg 1896, opened 1.d4 d5 2.c4 e6 3.Nc3 Nf6 4.Bg5 Be7 5.e3 c6 6.Bd3 Qa5, was the sequence played in this critical last round game.

The Soviet Master S. Rosenberg, who wrote about the origins of the Cambridge Springs Defense in the magazine "64" (translated by the late Dan Scoones in Northwest Chess March 1972, pages 17-19) quotes Alexander Alekhine, who believed that openings should not be named after those who played them first, but rather those who brought them to the attention of the chess world. This explains why the sequence 1.d4 d5 2.c4 e6 3.Nc3 Nf6 4.Bg5 Nbd7 5.e3 c6 6.Nf3 Qa5 is named after a small town in northwestern Pennsylvania, midway between Chicago and New York. The Cambridge Springs was played four times in this event, with the games involving world class players. It is one of a handful of opening lines named after American players or cities – the Benko Gambit, Wilkes Barre, and McCutcheon are three others that spring readily to mind.

Cambridge Springs 1904 by Robert Sherwood, with a foreword by Andy Soltis and contributions by the English chess historian A.J. Gillam and Frank Camaratta is a major contribution to American chess history which covers the tournament from all angles. This includes not only an in depth analysis of the games, but every other detail including the distinctive pieces used in the event. This is a book that all those interested in American chess history will want to have.

Tigran Petrosian was for many years one of the more underestimated world champions. Recently, however, like Emanuel Lasker, his career has enjoyed new appreciation. In part this is due to two books published by Russell Enterprises. The first, which came out in 2019, was The King's Indian According to Tigran Petrosian by Igor Yanvarjov, which made the case for the "Iron Tiger" having mastered KID structures. The second and new work is The Exchange Sacrifice According to Tigran Petrosian.

Everyone knows Petrosian was the master of the exchange sacrifice with the game Reshevsky-Petrosian, Zurich 1953, perhaps the most famous example of his skill at transcending the traditional values of the chess pieces. What is not as appreciated is just how often Petrosian was prepared to sacrifice the exchange in every conceivable situation from attack to defense.

Greek Grandmaster Vassilios Kotronias, the author of this important new book, has examined 36 of Petrosian's games in great depth, from the dawn of his career to the final years. Interestingly, this includes not only the ninth world champions successes, but also his failures. Not every exchange sacrifice he made was successful. This is a book that will increase the positional understanding of any player who reads it, primarily players rated 2000 on up.

The Polish Defense covers more ground than one might first suspect. It includes not only 1.d4 b5 (the Polish Defense proper), also but the St. George Defense (1.e4 e6 2.d4 a6 intending 3...b5 or 1.e4 a6 2.d4 b5), 1.Nf3 b5, and 1.f4 b5. While none of these are likely to be seen on a regular basis at the highest level (1.Nf3 Nf6 2.g3 b5 being a major exception), they are playable in games between mortals where they can be paired with 1.b4 for a complete repertoire.

The author of Attacking the Strongpoint, Grandmaster Igor Zaitzev, is one of the most creative players in the history of chess. Consider that he not only invented the variation of the Ruy Lopez that bears his name (1.e4 e5 2.Nf3 Nc6 3.Bb5 a6 4.Ba4 Nf6 5.0-0 Be7 6.Re1 b5 7.Bb3 d6 8.c3 0-0 9.h3 Bb7) but also discovered important novelties in a number of other openings including 1.e4 c6 2.d4 d5 3.Nc3 dxe4 4.Nxe4 Nd7 5.Ng5!?, and 1.c4 e5 2.Nc3 Nf6 3.Nf3 Nc6 4.g3 Bb4 5.Bg2 0-0 6.0-0 e4 7.Ng5 Re8 8.f3 e3!? Who can forget the famous knight sacrifice 11.Ng5! (Diagram), successfully employed in game ten of the 1978 Karpov-Korchnoi, World Championship match.

Many thought at the time this sacrifice was the brainchild of another of Karpov's seconds, Mikhail Tal. Not so says the 12th World Champion Anatoly Karpov in his tribute to his long-time helper who also assisted Tigran Petrosian.

Today, taking into account how chess has developed this century, with its ever increasing reliance on the silicon oracle, it is unlikely that a chess thinker like Igor Zaitzev will be seen again. As Gary Kasparov mentions in his foreword, Zaitzev possessed an unorthodox chess vision that enabled him to see what others could not.

In Attacking the Strongpoint the Russian grandmaster shares his philosophy of chess, offering new insights on classical games and presenting some of his best efforts. He also offers a behind the scenes view of what it was like to work as Anatoly Karpov's long-time second and in so doing preserves a part of chess history that has all but disappeared.

It's been roughly thirty years since the last player has had an adjourned games and silicon oracles analyze the opening stage of the game without prejudice and at incredible depth. Unquestionably the use of computers has enriched the game in many ways, pointing out new ways of looking at positions. However, it has also taken something away. One can appreciate from this book that the creativity and spirit of discovery of Zaitzev cannot be replicated in 21st Century chess.

At the Chess Café on Monday, February 27, we had another interesting collection of players ranging in strength from various master levels to beginner. Some talk, some mostly listen, and the subject matter is freely expressed and unrecorded. Among the games we looked at on the screen was Bronstein-Tal from Riga 1968 (1-0), which opened with a Falkbeer Counter Gambit. Bronstein forced the trade of queens on move 10, and for the rest of the game it seemed like almost every move was an attack. The winner was told afterward that he had better moves early on, but he replied that this was a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to offer the exchange to Tal (an interesting fact that Paul dug up).

On Saturday, March 4th, the 2023 San Francisco Scholastic Chess Championship took place in the County Fair Building in Golden Gate Park. For this renewal of this event in person, some 300 K-12 students signed up. Strong rains had come overnight and early in the morning, but had pretty much left the city by the 10am start time. Every row of tables in the long high tournament room was busy with quiet and lively competition during the four rounds of play. This Garden Court Room is high-ceilinged with excellent illumination from a slightly arched, paneled skylight and long rows of white globe electric lights running just under the tops of the long side walls.

During some eight hours plus of setting up, breaking down, eating, and going home, many people stand out among the players, parents, and others. Tournament Directors and volunteers including organizers and teachers ran a tight ship. The many helpers not named below include Alex Robins, Sophie Adams, Mitchell Sains, Alyssa Stone, Judit Sztaray, and many others. I've been to most of these tournaments, and this was probably the best one yet.

A real trouper, the Mechanics' Institute Chess Coordinator Paul Whitehead, performed a long simultaneous exhibition of master chess in the outer hall, taking on all comers with just a few breaks from a little after 10am to the late hours of the afternoon. When I arrived, players were standing three-deep all around a group of exhibit tables arranged into a large gated rectangle, inside which he made his endless circuit. In a way it seemed like all-you-can-eat or a bottomless cup of coffee.

A bit later some boards emptied, and I was able to start a game with him, a 2...d6 Sicilian that he met with 3. Bb5 check. He said about move 8 or 10 that my moves were simple and good, but he had to take his break before we could get well into it. His backup was Ladia Jirasek, a 22-year-old International Master, who soon took charge of the nascent middle-game and finished me off with a knight fork on the queenside while I was defending for too long without finding a counterattack on a rather low-ceiling flight in the air of that game.

“But that’s chess,” said Ladia several times later with a smile, when we took advantage of an opportunity to talk away from the boards for a few minutes about how games go and players we know, and situations like the turnabout of expectations, the emotions and mysteries of playing: that’s chess, too. I discovered he’s been teaching Yali Dancig-Perlman, a chess friend of mine from several weekend tournaments at Mechanics’ Institute. I told Ladia how I’ve noticed Yali’s skill, confidence, and winning ways.

An interesting grade-school student from the Marshall Elementary School Chess Club in the Mission district was there at his first tournament. I was close enough to one of his games to notice that his resignation was delivered with a gentle little smile that was so genuine I was touched when I reflected on it later. For a moment it seemed to transcend the pain that losing can be so full of.

A little play can make your day, as the ad says.

The father of another player spoke to me generally and was interested in hearing about the classic bishop sac described in The Art of Attack in Chess by Vuckovich. He wrote down the title of that book and that of another called The Art of Defense in Chess by Polugaevsky and Damsky (1988). Paul Whitehead recently devoted a series of very interesting OL classes to each book.

Drama, sport, entertainment, social interaction. Chess-playing is a public performance of what you have practiced, and a test of your adaptability given that almost every one of your games is a little different from the rest, and move after move, the parallel strivings of both players have to be taken into account.

2023 San Francisco Scholastic Championship

We at the Mechanics' Institute Chess Club are proud to have held our 2023 San Francisco Scholastic Chess Championship on March 4th. This was the first time this tournament has been held in-person since 2019, before the pandemic, and we consider it a resounding success! We had 274 players who were present day-of and participated in the tournament (294 total unique registrants at the start of the day). For many of our players this was their first ever in-person tournament, and we think we might have some future TNM regulars in the audience. Check out next month's newsletter for a full report on the tournament, but for now we would like to extend some well-deserved thanks.

We all want to give a huge shout-out to our Chief Arbiter Judit Sztaray and Tournament Directors Scott Mason, Richard Koepcke, Arthur Liou, Vincent Ng, Michael Hsu, Abhinav Penagalapati, Ricky Cheung, Dennis Tocol, Jaysen Shi, Dawson Wu, Aaron Tam, and Guillermo Rey. We could not put on a tournament without them. We are also extremely grateful to all our volunteers, staff, and Trustees for supporting this event.

The scholastic championship was also overflowing with chess masters who helped to teach and entertain our participants. Our newsletter editor FM Paul Whitehead gave a simultaneous exhibition with 20 boards, and we also had special guest appearances from IM Keaton Kiewra and a surprise drop in from IM Ladia Jirasek.

The Bernal Chess Club took first place in the Combined Team Competition – congratulations!

Scholastic Chess Camps

Mechanics' Institute camps are an opportunity for beginner chess players to join and start a lifelong appreciation of the royal game of chess and play with other kids in the historic Mechanics' Institute Chess Room!

Intermediate students will learn tactics, how to defend common opening traps, and review famous games.

Join us and start a lifelong journey through one of the world's greatest games.

A Puzzle in the Library

Every week or so the Mechanics' Institute's Head of Technical Services, Steven Dunlap, puts up a chess puzzle in the library for our members to solve.

White to move. From Pandemic Shark: A Journey Through the World of Chess Improvement (2020), by Daniel Gormally. This one's a bit tough, but 1.Ng6! threatens 2.Qxh7+! Kxh7 3.Rh3+ Kg8 4.Rh8#. Black can defend with 1...h6, but then 2.Nh8! threatens 3.Qxf7+ and 4.Qxg7#. And if 2...Rf8 3.Qxh6 will lead to inevitable mate on g7.

Seeking Scholastic Chess Coaches

Are you interested in joining the team at Mechanics' Institute? The Institute is currently seeking Scholastic Chess Instructors for the upcoming school year. Qualified candidates should have a foundational knowledge of chess and should be familiar with or willing to learn chess instructional techniques. Candidates should also have a basic foundation in classroom management and conflict resolution strategies, particularly working with children. This is an in-person position and candidates must be able to commute to schools in San Francisco. If you're interested follow the link below or reach out to our Chess Program Manager, Alex Robins, at arobins@milibrary.org.

Tales from a Misspent Youth

"To be a chess player is the sign of a gentleman, to be a good chess player is the sign of a misspent youth." -Jose Raul Capablanca, World Chess Champion 1921-1927

When I first visited San Francisco in the Fall/Winter of 1976-77, I visited several chess playing venues. The Meat Market coffee house at 4123 24th St. was one. Vesuvio Cafe on Columbus and the Grand Piano coffee shop at Haight and Cole were other venues where I went to play.

When I moved to San Francisco in 1978, the Meat Market was still the main meeting place for chess players. Only the Mechanics' Institute Chess Club was better known. Half of the Meat Market's clientele were chess players at any given moment. This was the situation until the owners wised up and realized that chess players did not make the most ideal customer base. This is because so many of them have very little money. They buy a cup of coffee – maybe – and sit there for hours arguing with each other and discouraging the paying customers from staying. As a rule, they get kicked out of every venue where they become a major part of the clientele. They do much better in venues where they can pose as local color. So – to make a long story short – the chess players were kicked out of the Meat Market in 1981 or '82.

We were without a venue until one of our number said, "Hey, I have a friend who just opened a coffee shop and needs some customers." Or some such. The place was the newly opened Cafe de Medici at 151 Noe St. at the corner of Henry St. A small place with two rooms and windows on two sides. It is now the home of L'Aardoise Restaurant which opened a month after the Medici closed. But I get ahead of myself.

The chess players were very welcome at the Medici. After a year, though, the proprietor started to get antsy. The chess players were his main clientele – never a good sign – and he wanted his business to prosper. What to do? He got an idea: why not have the Noe Valley poets, who were then centered on the nearby Cafe Flore, do poetry readings on Tuesday nights? He would thereby expand his customer base and fill his cafe. On the surface this looked like an excellent idea – except the poets were as penurious as the chess players and at least as cantankerous. And he didn't tell the chess players to stop during the readings.

The poets had their readings in the back room of the cafe while the chess players took up the tables in front. Chess clocks make a lot of noise – what with people hitting them hard with chess pieces. Moving the pieces makes noise. The continual banter between players also contributes to what can be a very noisy game. The common stereotype of the quiet chess player is not universal and should never be applied to coffee house chess.

After the poets had been there a month or so the tension between the two groups had grown palpable. Finally, one of the poets, a rather largish Latino fellow with a gruff manner, came in to recite. As he walked past the chess players he announced "I'm here to read my poetry and you guys are going to be quiet!" One of the chess players – a biker type named Steve – responded with a "Yadda yadda" and the games continued.

There were at least two speed (five minutes for each player) games going on at the time as well as a backgammon game. Backgammon is even noisier than chess, what with all the rattling of dice in the cups and the tossing of the dice onto the board. That and the click-click-click of the chess clocks and you can imagine the din. The scene was set for a showdown.

Nothing really happened until our star poet got up and started to read. About two lines into it our poet exploded and told us to stop. Words were said in return at which point about 20 poets were up and out of their seats. Arms waving. Shouting. Gesticulating. The whole bit. The game players kept at their games. A few words were said in response, but when the clock is ticking one must concentrate on the game and not on peripheral distractions like poets. The poets left – most of them anyway.

The upshot of it all was that the poets and the chess players were both 86ed the next week and the cafe closed within a month. Not a happy ending for any of the parties involved. But it did make for a tale.

One of the backgammon players in this tale was the late Jay Whitehead. One of the best chess players in the US at that time, he once qualified to play in the US Championship. I'm told that he was even better at backgammon than chess. I knew him from various chess venues in San Francisco.

I went to the last two Lone Pine tournaments as a spectator in 1980 and 1981. Jay played in the last one where he achieved an International Master norm. International Master and International Grandmaster are titles given out by FIDE, the international chess organization. They are awarded to players who reach certain standards (norms) in tournament play.

Among his opponents at Lone Pine was Soviet Grandmaster Efim Geller, at that time one of the best in the world for 30 years and one of the few players to have a plus score against Bobby Fischer. He was also Boris Spassky's lead second when Spassky played Fischer for the title in Reykjavik in 1972.

Lone Pine had a couple bars where several players met to socialize after playing. When the next day's pairings were announced and we knew Jay was going to play Geller, the next day everyone went to one of the bars and pooled all their published material (no computers in those stone-age days). They found a line in the Sicilian Defense where Geller had been held to draws in the past. Jay played it and it worked. Geller offered a draw around move 30.

Jay ended up giving up chess and backgammon a couple years later. He joined the Hari Krishnas in Berkeley and stayed with them until his untimely death some 30 years later. A great loss for everyone who knew him.

The Greyhound to Lone Pine arrived shortly after midnight. When I went there in 1981 for the last of the tournaments I met Victor Korchnoi as I stepped off the bus. Recognizing him I said, "Mr. Korchnoi, I came to see you play!" He shook my hand and said "Tomorrow." He was there to meet someone who was on the bus. I never had any further conversation with him.

Korchnoi, himself, had arrived on that same bus a week earlier on the Sunday night before the first round of the tournament. He had fled the Soviet Union a few years earlier and received asylum in the Netherlands. Since then the Soviets had boycotted every tournament in which he played.

Lone Pine was the biggest cash prize in the chess world at that time and the Soviets always sent two of their best players. Korchnoi's last minute arrival at Lone Pine had the Soviets scrambling. There were already two of their top players present and ready to play. What to do? They called their embassy in Washington and received instructions to play. His game, which he won against Yusupov (later to become a Championship Candidate and one of the Soviets' best trainers) was his first tournament game against a Soviet player since his defection. Soon after that game the Soviets dropped their boycott of his tournaments.

Also at that tournament was a recent defector named Igor Ivanov. He was an International Master who had won a game against World Champion Anatoly Karpov. On the strength of that win he was able to travel outside the country to play. He defected in Canada about a month before this tournament at Lone Pine.

I got a ride out of the tournament to Monterey with Ted Yudacufski, one of the tournament directors. Ivanov rode with us. He spoke very little English. A big man wearing a Jerry Jeff Walker t-shirt (and who liked to buy beer whenever we stopped). I asked him the obvious question, "How do you like it here?" He shook both hands – one with a beer – and shouted, "I am freedom!" You go, Igor!

I did gofer work for Max Burkett at Lone Pine. Max's job was to type up and publish the previous day's games by the next morning. Everyone got a copy. The original top sheets of the players' score sheets were theirs, but Max got the carbon copies and made his bulletins from them. Sometimes he'd have me watch and keep a score where both players' handwriting was so bad that he couldn't read them. I'd sit on a chair next to the players and write their moves down – legibly.

While we were working the night after their game Max offered me both copies of the Korchnoi-Yusupov game. I was in one of my hippie non-materialistic phases at the time and turned them down. AAAAAAARGH! AAAAAAAAH!

My first contact with chess was from reading the article on it in the World Book Encyclopedia as a child. My parents bought a set for the family when I was 10 or 11 years old. When I showed the article to my mother and asked her about it she said it was extremely complicated and people spent their entire lives analyzing a single position. She created quite the aura of mystery about it.

Soon after this I purchased a cheap plastic set in a local store. The copy of the rules that came with the set had diagrams showing the pieces only moving one square and didn't explain that the pieces could move the full length of the board. So our games resembled checkers in their slowness. The rules also didn't show how to capture. Being children, we were quite inventive in solving that problem. I played my first game by the rules some years later.

Endgame Lab

FM Paul Whitehead is starting an eight week class on endgames, running on Thursdays, April 13 to June 1 from 5:30-6:30pm. Here is the course description:

The endgame is that part of the game separating the strong player from the weak. How many games are won or lost because basic knowledge of endgames is lacking?

In this eight-week course, FM Paul Whitehead will lead a discussion covering basic and intermediate endings, including reviewing the participant's knowledge of basic checkmates, principals, and terminology – opposition, centralization, zugzwang. We will discuss and review the theory and practice of king and pawn endings, rook endings, minor piece endings, queen endings, and various material imbalances.

Participants will also be encouraged to bring in examples from their own games, and there will be plenty of take-home material and examples for independent study.

Take your game to the next level!

It's also important to note that every World Champion from Steinitz to Carlsen has been an outstanding endgame player – it can even be said that mastery of the endgame is what raises them above the rest of the Grandmasters.

The young Bobby Fischer had his endings down cold, and with black found the only move to draw in a game with Svetozar Gligoric at the Candidates Tournament in 1959. What was Fischer's move?

Solutions

Tony's Teasers

1. M. Havel, 1904. 1.Qd1! Threatens 2.Nf3+. 1...g1=N (1...g1=Q 2.Qf3+ Kh2 3.Qh5#) 2.Nf2+ Kh2 3.Qd6#!

2. S. Loyd, 1877. 1.Qh8! The white queen nimbly flies around the board, e.g. 1...Rc4+ 2.Kb3+ Rc3+ 3.Qxc3+ Kb1 4.Qb2#. Or 1...Rh4 2.Qxh4 d4+ 3.Kb3 Kb1 4.Qh1#. Or 1...Rb4 2.Kc2+ d4 3.Qa8+ Ra4 4.Qxa4#.

Endgame Lab

Gligoric – Fischer, Candidates Tournament 1959.

1...Kb8! Keeps the "Distant Opposition" and draws. But not 1...Kc7? 2.Kc5 Kb7 3.Kb5! Kc7 4.Ka6, and white wins
